HIGHLANDER GUIDE

"It feels amazing knowing that I was selected to represent the university and am able to share my Highlander story with those who tour with me"

- Justin Dryer

Why should you become a Highlander Guide?

The Radford University Highlander Guides are a group of successful students that hold an important position on campus. They represent RU in a variety of ways including leading campus tours and participating in recruitment. The application closes in February 2020 as well as the opportunity to receive the benefits included.

Justin Dryer, a junior psychology major, has been in the program for two years. He is also a student coordinator for the Office of Admissions, a conduct officer for the Conduct Office, and a peer instructor.

"I wanted to become a Highlander Guide because I truly love the connections I'm able to make with families when they come to visit campus," Dryer said. "It feels amazing knowing that I was selected to represent the university and am able to share my Highlander story with those who tour with me."

Robin McGrath, a senior theatre major, has just joined the program. She is also the president of the Sigma Alpha Omega social sorority. She has a lot to say about becoming a Highlander Guide.

"I became a highlander guide because it makes a lasting impression on a potential new student," McGrath said. "When I was taking tours of different colleges, some people just seemed unenthusiastic to be at their school and didn't have pride in their tours. When I toured Radford my guides were so upbeat and happy. They had answers to my questions and cared about my thoughts. I always wanted to be that person for someone, so when I had the chance- I took it."
